THE Li'l Abner cartoon is 25 years old this year. Al Capp's collection of levable freaks and caricatures first appeared on August 13, 1934, in seven newspapers. The cartoon strip now runs in 1,000 newspapers in 28 countries.

Capp has created a whole new rustic folklore. For a quarter century he and his Dogpatchers have lampooned everything sacred in North Americaand made North America like it.

Capp seemed to lose heart for a time when McCarthyism was raging. Then, he said in a magazine article that America had become too sensitive, and had lost the gift of laughing at it-self. But he changed his mind when the political air cleared.

The Yokums and their friends and enemies, habitually tripping over their own feet, have blundered on to the Broadway stage (a musical version of Dogpatch played for two years) and frolicked across the covers of national magazines.

Author John Steinbeck had this to say:

"I think Capp may possibly be the best writer in the world today. I am satirist since Laurence Sterne. Capp has taken our social structure, our economics, and examined them gently, like amusing bugs.

"Then he has pulled the nose a little longer, made outstanding ears a little more outstanding, described it in a kind of dreadful folk poetry and returned to us a hilarious picture of our ridiculous selves but with so much effective good nature that we seem to have thought of it our-

The creator of Li'l Abner was born in New Haven, Connecticut, in 1909, one of four children of a cheerful, feckless man who had studied law at Yale and was a good amateur cartoonist. The family was always short of money. At the age of nine, Al Capp slipped while hopping a ride on an ice truck and lost his left leg under a street car.

While he was learning to wield his wooden leg, he amused himself by drawing funny pictures. By the time he reached his teens, he had decided

He lasted six months drawing a cartoon panel in New York for Associated Press. Fired from that he worked his way through Massachusetts Art School on his earnings as an illustrator for the Boston Sunday Post; became an assistant to a

Meanwhile, a car-toon story and a set of characters were growing in his mind. The seeds of the idea had been planted years before, when Capp was a teen-ager. He and a friend had passed a summer hitch-hiking through the Cumberland Mountains, meeting the a summer hitch-hiking simple, kindly hill-country people who were later to develop, in comically distorted form, into the Dogpatchers.

After Capp had been working two years for somebody else, his ideas took shape in sample strips, which he submitted to a syndicate. They said the cartoon would be acceptable—if Capp changed Li'l Abner to a football hero and made Dogpatch a typical small town rather than an eccentric mountain village.

Capp angrily refused to change his strip into something stereotyped and conventional. The decision took courage. He was nearly broke, and he had a wife and baby to support.

He took sample strips to United Feature Syndicate, who welcomed the strip and gave him a contract to sign. Capp's cartoon has been distributed by United Feature

Fluoridation

WHILE battles rage here and in W many other parts of the country over the issue of fluoridation of the public water supply, York Township in Ontario is exploring the possibil-ity of accomplishing the purpose of fluoridation without imposing it on those who would derive no benefit or who object to the principle of mass medication. York is looking into the feasibility or otherwise of voluntary

Not long ago the Supreme Court of Ontario declared fluoridation of municipal water supplies to be illegal, in that the practice was ultra vires of existing provincial legislation.

Opponents of fluoridation in many parts of the country were quick to misinterpret this as a judicial finding that the practice was harmful, whereas the court was merely dealing with the issue of legal power. Ontario government has since forbidden any further extension of fluoridation pending the report of a special investigating committee head-ed by a judge of the provincial appeal court.

Without waiting for that, York Township council has instructed its medical officer of health to explore the possibility of providing fluoride in usable form to residents who wish rather than by way of mass edication. One suggestion is that treated water be made available from special distribution points; another is that formulas be published showing citizens how to fluoride water for themselves-a risky operation by all

The most ardent proponents of fluoridation probably would agree that voluntary medication if feasible is preferable to mass medication, where the health of the community is not at stake. The question in this case is whether individual treatment is practicable or even possible. If it is, it would appear to overcome every objection of the antifluoridationists. It has been widely stated by many eminent authorities that short of complete fluoridation of the public supply would be either satisfactory or workable; but even so results of the inquiry in York might be worth study. That need not have any bearing on the sounding of public opinion by way of a vote at the civic elections.

Full of Encouragement

SOMETHING unique happened at the United Nations the day before yesterday; all 82 members agreed on a resolution. One does not easily recall any such unanimity on any previous matter during the entire 14year life of the UN organization. The passage of the resolution was not automatic and therefore not a mere formality; some members states had to be persuaded to agree. This how-ever adds to the verity of the UN

The subject matter was disarmament, which has been debated so much before but always without success. It must be considered now that all member nations of the UN realize to a degree not hitherto apparent that world tension cannot really be eased until some effective steps are taken to curb the evergrowing armament race. It is the menace of terrifying weapons of destruction that primarily keeps the world divided into two camps and breeds the distrust and fears that are rampant.

far the most important step ever taken by the UN. It is only a first step, but everything has to have a beginning. World disarmament with effective controls has been endorsed only in principle, and like the fine print in private contracts it is the details that will count when measures to arrange the controls are discussed. These are sure to provoke lengthy argument before the resolution can assume the substance of reality. In all probability complete disarmament will never come about, but in the mood of two days ago the UN may find it possible to proscribe the nuclear deterrents which make real peace impossible, and enforce a hard line of limitations. This may be more hopeful than otherwise, for it is the factor of inspection with control that is crucial to disarmament, and this will not be easily secured.

Nevertheless the unanimity shown is encouraging; it may betoken a change in the political climate of world affairs and there are grounds for thinking this might be so.

Keep It Safe and Sane

TOMORROW will be Halloween with its measure of fun and frolic, and regrettably also its share of downright public mischief. Let us keep it safe and sane. With com-munity bonfires and treats, organized parties for youngsters in most areas and private programs in the homes, there should be opportunity for all young people to enjoy themselves without harm to themselves or hurt to anyone else.

The celebration divides into three phases: what families do for their own children and those neighbors who want to do a bit of "ghosting"; the public bonfires and treats organized on an area basis, often under the guidance of our fire departments; and the somewhat older celebrants who seem to think that working public mischief is funny.

For the last named, the mischief-makers, there can be an effective remedy. If the Greater Victoria community takes it into its head to stop this witless kind of hoodlumism there is an effective means of doing so all mischief - makers should be reported at once to the police, and meanwhile watched by adults who later can appear in evidence against them. The rest then would be up to the courts. A few realistically stiff punishments, handed out for cause, would quickly take the sting out of this abuse of Halloween by the few who are immature in mind or malicious. A community is the kind of place that it wishes to be. In the last analysis, Greater Victoria would have everything to gain and nothing to lose by setting its united face now against public mischief. It can be done. In a law-abiding community no lesser standard is good enough. Here's to a safe and sane Halloween with all of the fun in the world but no malice!

The republic of Vietnam, long on history but with only a brief background of independence, emerged from the Geneva conference of 1954 which ended a nineyear fight by the French against Com-munist forces led by Ho Chi Minh, a revolutionary who once lived in Paris and received his basic training in Moscow.

The 1954 conference carved Vietnam into two zones at the 17th parallel. The and the southern half, with a population of some 10,000,000, to forces friendly to the West

A Hamiota church minister and a Winnipeg sports editor have been exchanging jobs for a week to weigh the pros and cons of Sunday sport. One of them is "for" and the other "against" and there is no need to specify which is which. I was reminded by this episode of one athlete who reconciled in himself the issue of sport on the Sabbath, by name Eric Liddell, the flying Scot of Britain's 1924 Olympic team. He was to run in the 100 metres but the first heats were scheduled for a Sunday and he declined; instead as a divinity student he occupied the pulpit of a Paris church. That was showing moral mettle; and a few days later he showed his physical mettle by running to victory in the 400 metres.

Rifle bullets and fire don't mix, so Sooke firefighters realized the other day and as I recollect from an incident of my prehistoric days. A sergeant I knew couldn't persuade a guard relief to leave their cosy fireside quarters and take their turn at sentry duty on the cold dark coaling dock outside. So he threw a handful of bullets in the fire. I will tell you that no squad ever shot out of a building more swiftly than did these recalcitrant soldiers to escape the exploding bullets. He was a queer card, this N.C.O., what nowadays would be called a beatnik. Once he solemnly enrolled a whole platoon of volunteers for submarine cycling duty; but that is another story.

Coldwell, the CCF leader, says there is no difference between Conservatives and Liberals and that Canada must have a party which represents the people of the country. Between them Conservatives and Liberals polled some 5,500,000 votes at the last election and the CCF about a tenth of that number. Does Mr. Coldwell mean that the five million non-socialists are not people?

* * * It has been the proud boast of the Nordic peoples that they are the topdogs of toughness among the human race albeit people like the Ghurkas probably could skin us a mile. At any rate you would notice a university specialist affirming that the sun is bad for those of blue eyes and fair skins; which will be why so much tan-lotion is sold. Only the Latins and persons of darkish hue can strin abandon without fear of the ill effects of sunburn. Climate breeds the man and his complexion, you see. One ders however how this fits the prize-ring, which in northern latitudes seems to be dominated by olive and dark-skinned champions. Not much trace among them of the lethargy allegedly afflicting people of sun-kissed races.

Dr. Wernher von Braun, the former German rocketry expert who heads one of the U.S.A.'s missile programs, says the Russians will have a rocket within two years capable of sending a busload of astronauts into orbit around the earth, "If we con inue at our leisurely pace we will have to pass Russian customs when we land on the moon," he added in urging his people to get a move on. This is worth thinking about. Supposing the Russians do get that far ahead and man the moon long before our side does and they might not let us pass the customs this could them moon-Martians indeed. Disarmament Prospects

Same Problems---20 Years After

PROSPECTS for making a start towards a substantial program of disarmament "appear brighter today than at any time since the Second World War," said Mr. Ormsby - Gore, the United King-dom delegate, in his speech in the United Nations Assembly debate. That, I think, represents a very general feeling. There is to be a resumption of serious discussion of the problems, after a gap of two years. And during these two years the conviction has been deepening that a reduction of the massive burden of armaments is absolutely essential, both in the interests of peace-since armaments breed fears and fear may breed wars and also because, to quote Mr. Ormsby-Gore-"There are nnumerable projects which would benefit Britain and the whole of humanity if only some of the resources at present devoted to armaments were available for these projects."

But the British delegate's guarded timism was based also on the fact that the latest Soviet proposals submitted to the assembly show that "there are important points upon which our two positions have come closer together."

The suggestion is that the two sets of proposals—British and Soviet—which the assembly has before it should be passed to the new Ten-Country Commission as a starting point for its detailed work. To them could be added others from other governments. It is, for example, expected in Washington that when the "Coolidge Committee" which is reviewing the whole subject has completed its task, the United States government will have fresh proposals to

By W. N. EWER, from London about the possibility of making real progress, the British government is, of course, fully aware of the formidable nature of the problems which have to be solved. They exist even if. as one hopes, there is goodwill on all sides and a readiness to abstain either from propaganda exercises, from political polemics and from those charges and counter-charges which have disfigured so many discussions in the past.

* * * I suppose that anyone of my genwho can remember the history of the abortive disarmament conference which opened with such high hopes in 1939 must be more acutely conscious of the difficulties than

For one has the constant and worrying feeling of having been through all this before. There is not, and indeed cannot well be, any new problem different in essence from those which we tried and failed to solve then. Nor any proposals which are essentially new

It is true that there were in those years no nuclear weapons and therefore no demand for abolition. But there were proposals for the abolition of all aerial bombing, of all military aircraft, of submarines. The idea was the same: to outlaw the most terrible weapons of which we then knew. It was in the phrase of the day "qualitative disarmament.'

Regional demilitarization - now called "disengagement" - was a much debated theme. So methods of guarding against "sur-prise attacks." We were familiar with all the technical difficulties of assess ing and laying down limits for the levels of armed forces, of armaments, of various kinds of military ex-

A paired driver by two citizens in that the policemen are only a small Edmonton is a reminder that the fraction of the public. The implication noted, one essential for any comprehensive proposal for the reduction and limitation of armaments is that "the balance of security between nations is not upset." That goes to the root of the matter.

Nations do not maintain massive armaments or armaments of any kind-for their own sake. They maintain them because they believe them essential for national security.

And the first test which any gov ernment will necessarily and inevitably apply to any proposal for any kind of disarmament is whether or not it will impair the security of its country. Just as it was a quarter of a century ago, that remains the kernel of the whole problem. That, and the need for "effective" international control at each stage of disarmament. Even given political agreement on these principles, it is bound to be a formidable task to translate them into practice. That task again faces us all. It will call for much patience. It cannot conceivably be carried out in a few weeks or months. But at any rate it is being attempted again,

The British government's attitude is clear. "Like the United States delegation," said Mr. Ormsby-Gore, "we are prepared to take large steps or small steps provided only that they are steps that lead us in the right direction.

In the elderly, reflexes have slowed down without their knowing it. In the young, the reflexes are so fast as to encourage all sorts of risks. But the accident wards are full of young people whose reflexes were not quite as fast as they were thought to be. As the army showed, only one man in 50 can do 25 pushups. Dollar Barrier

OTTAWA (CP)-A proclamation that should clear away some long-standing barriers to Canadian trade has been made by the International Monetary Fund.

The statement by the fund's executive directors at Washington last weekend was aimed at eliminating most, if not all, of the discrimination practised by many countries against imports from Canada and the United States.

The IMF declared that, with a limited exception, the world's trading nations can no longer claim to discriminate against dollar imports on the grounds of a shortage of gold and dol-

It said the fund's member countries — about 70 of them — should act "with all feasible speed" to eliminate this dis-crimination.

Once carried out, officials said, the move could open some doors in Europe to Canadian products like grains, fresh apples, meats and can-ned fruits and vegetables. It could drop United Kingdom barriers to products such as bacon, drugs, tobacco, synthetic rubber and fish.

... Goes on Ox Hunt

By IAN GLENDAY

Ian Glenday, former member of The Daily Colonist aperts staff, is on an extended visit to England. This is another in his series of articles on the British sports seene.

British boxing took another stiff punch in prestige last week when a confident Bobby Neill, the British featherweight champion, crashed to the canvas five times in the first round before the referee stopped his non-title bout with world champion Davey Moore. Neill, who had been hoping to make a good showing against the American to set himself up for a title fight, instead had his ambitious plans wiped out in two minutes and 55 seconds—that was all the time Moore needed to make a mockery out of this headline 10-rounder at Wembley

Neill, a tough Scotsman, took some tremend ment and took it well in the brief time he was in the ring against the sharp-punching Negro. But the torrent of punches that sank into Neill's mid-section and crashed about his head were not only felt by the brave Scot but by every member of Britain's boxing fraternity who had harbored fond dreams that Neill would make some kind of an impression against the

Neill would make some kind of an impression against the world champion.

'Unfortunately, it was a story that has repeated itself too many times during recent years, the British callenger slumped on the canvas with the American fighter standing quietly in the corner and surveying the scene with an indifference that pointed out how easy it all had been. And with several British champions lined up for world title fights in the next few months the ending to the sad tale doesn't look like it will change.

British and Empire bantamweight champion Freddie Gilroy has been offered a crack at Joe Becerra's title in Los Angeles if Gilroy can defeat European titleholder Piero Rolls at Wembley next month. Gilroy, only 23, has defeated ex-world champion Mario D'Agata—his most impressive performance. Percy Lewis, the British Empire champion, is pressing for a title bout with the same Moore who battered the British champ. The winner of the Henry Cooper-Joe Erskine heavyweight bout at Earls Court next month has won Boxing Board approval to be ranked as the final eliminator for a world championship bout with Sweden's Ingemar Johansson. The memory of Brian London's attempt against Floyd Patterson, memory of Brian London's attempt against Floyd Patterson, who in turn was knocked out by the Swede, is still fresh in everyone's mind. Finally, there is the title bout in Houston in December between Dave Charnley, probably the most legiti-mate of British challengers, and Joe Brown, who has proved a tough fighting champion, in the lightweight division. Charnley faces terrific odds but seems the most talented of short list of talented British boxers and could make a fair

It could be, then, that Neill's humiliating defeat was only prejude to a number of disappointments facing British hters. But they apparently want to learn the hard way. tighters. But they apparently want to learn a chance at the title but the claim of Erskine or Cooper, after so many setcks in the heavyweight ranks, is hard to understand.

The British Board of Control did not give approval for London's fight with Patterson and the ex-British champion has probably earned his last big pay check from the ring. Yet, the British body has sanctioned a fight between Johansson and Cooper or Erskine in spite of the fact that the Swede de leated them both before rising to his present stature. It might be well for the British board to frown on all British attempts at world titles, at least until the present situation improves, if it feels that this country's boxing prestige is more important than providing a big pay night for an outclassed challenger and some uncomfortable moments for the long-suffering fans. At any rate there should be no howls of anguish from boxing officials here when their plans go wrong or face-saving officials here when their plans go wrong or face-saving alibis when their fighters are well beaten.

It was not pleasant to see Neill take the beating he did, courageous as he was in coming back for more punishment, but the worst moment in the fight came when he painfully arose from the canvas and stood in the centre of the ring with his head cupped in his gloves, then walked slowly to his corner and shamefully rested his head on the ropes. It was as if Neill did not mind the battering he took but was more concerned at "letting everyone down." Those were his words in a hushed dressing room but he did not have to tell anyone how he felt. It was written all over his face.

Power of Veto Weakness Of K's Plan?

China said Thursday that Soviet use of its veto power in the United Nations would betray a weakness in Premier Khrushchev's proposal for total disarmament.

Addressing the General Asnbley's 82-member political nmittee, Chinese delegate H. Wei did not condemn the Soviet plan but he declared that its "actual worth remains to be discovered." He added his delegation views a British plan for comprehensive disarma-ment as "much more business-

Wei quoted from the Soviet declaration presented to the General Assembly Sept, 18 by Khrushchev, which stated:

"To anticipate possible attempts on the part of states to circumvent or violate the proposed agreement on general and complete disarmament, the agreement shall contain a provision stipulating that any question of its violation shall be submitted for immediate consideration by the Security Council or the General As sembly of the United Nations.' This statement indicated, said Wei, that the Soviet Union wishes to link disarmament control with its power of veto in the Security Council.

"This has been the position of the Soviet Union in the past—is it still so now?" he asked.

Much Concern In Industry Says Husband

Mayor Percy Scurrah yesterday pledged himself to keep up the fight for more work for Victoria's shipbuilding industry.

He spoke following cere monies in which Mrs. Scurrah, wife of the mayor, laid the first 15-ton keel-section for "hull 262" which will become the destroyer escort Saskatchewan.

Harold Husband, president of Victoria Machinery Depot, where the hull is being built, told assembled guests there is great concern in the west coast shipbuilding industry at the scarcity of work.

He said VMD and other western yards have proved in past shipbuilding programs that they are second to none in Canada for efficiency.

Cream puffs may mean quite a lot to you, but to me they are an unpleasant re-minder of the day when I was about eight. With 25 cents in my pocket I hiked out to a con-fectioner's and spent it all on cream puffs. I ate every one on my way home and never since have I been able to look a cream puff in the face-greedy, wasn't I?

These chocolate-glazed cream puffs filled with a delicious butterscotch-orange cream are an ideal choice for dessert and an ideal choice for dessert and coffee parties. Planning Pays Off

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

Those of my readers who are planning on setting out raspberry canes for the first time this fall should keep several important points in mind. If planted out in such a way as to develop into bushlike clumps, picking is going to be difficult, while the weeding and cutting out the old canes will prove most troublesome,

By far the most satisfactory way of growing raspberries is in a narrow row against wire supports. All the necessary routine operations become much easier under this system, and in addition, the wire fence system gives you the most productive use of the ground occupied by the canes.

* * * Careful preparation of the soil is of paramount importance. Rasp-berries are greedy feeders, and they MUST have plenty of water, which isn't always easy to provide in a dry summer, and every opportunity should be taken to conserve the natural soil moisture.

The best way of doing this is to dig in all the compost leafmould, or farmyard manure you can get your

This material will act as a sponge, absorbing and holding moisture which would otherwise drain away through the subsoil; moreover, it provides some long-lasting nutrients as well, and creates a soil texture congenial to the raspberry roots.

Your berry bushes are going to live in the same place for a long, long time, and you'll never have a better chance to fix up a comfortable home for them than right now, before they are planted.

Late autumn is a good time to plant, when the soil is usually warm and friable, and the plants will have a good chance to settle down before winter arrives in earnest. Set the roots in the ground about 30 inches apart, and a couple of inches deeper than they were in the nursery, as in-dicated by the soil marks on the stem.

The new canes should not be allowed to bear any fruit in their first season, as all available energy should go into producing a really good root system and in throwing up some stout young canes for future cropping. Immediately after planting, cut each temptation to leave them alone and filch a little fruit next summer may be pretty hard to resist; but if you cheat in this fashion, you'll pay for it in the summer of 1961, when the gardeners who played it straight will harvest three times the crop you will

With the canes planted and well watered in, it is a good idea to get the stakes and wires erected. While wooden posts are adequate, I was lucky enough to secure some angle iron at a good price, and these stakes are drilled to take wires two feet and four feet above soil level I use old. four feet above soil level. I use old telephone wire with the insulation still on it, as it is quite cheap and strong, and the ties don't slip around on insulated wire as they do on the bare stuff.

When the raspberry "stools" are well established, they will throw up more canes than you can accommodate on your wire supports. Some of these can be grubbed out with a bit of root attached, and used to start another row. Retain about six of the strongest young canes. Young them strongest young canes, tying them fanwise to the wires.

Teachers Set the Pace

At Des Moines' KDPS-TV, the youngest educational TV station in the U.S., a crew-cut youngster sat in the director's chair urging the man on camera to square his picture. The kid at the audio control board looked 16. Inside KDPS's lone studio a cute blonde had the headset on indicating she was the floor manager.

A class in primary speech was drawing to a close which in turn ended the teaching for the day. However, a few minutes later the station went on the air again with a class for English teachers in how to teach reading. Teachers who formerly had to gather in one spot for this sort of instruction, could watch it at their

The kids at the controls are all students at Des Moines Technical High School where KDPS is located. They man the switches and the cameras as part of their classwork. If they work at night, they get paid. Otherwise, no.

Ralph Joy, program director and former teacher, who was showing me "One of the benefits of television experience is that teachers are going to be much better teachers. They prepare much more carefully because they don't dare make mistakes. This has consequences clear down through the public school system. A principal just told me: Tve noticed a lot of upgrading of my teachers after watching TV teachers.'

"The other in-class teachers are exposed to the TV teachers and this stirs them up. In order to co-operate fully with the TV teachers, they've had to do more research and better preparation.

"Then there's the curriculum the public school is seriously re-exam-ining its curriculum and wondering why it's teaching some things and not teaching others. TV has been a great stimulant all the way around."

KDPS has five fulltime teachers now and is very pleased with them.
"Basil Murray, who teaches sixth grade science, is the John Gielgud of TV teaching. You should see him. He paces the floor. He throws himself into every bit of it. He's up half the night preparing for his class he works 14 or 15 hours a day.

"Chances are—next year it's back to the classroom for all of them. We're not interested in developing prima donnas or stars. We stress the teamwork thing."

I met three of the TV teachers—Mrs. Mildred Ballou, schools husband

Mrs. Mildred Ballou, whose husband is also a teacher; Miss Hilda Hammer, a huge woman whose has been teaching for 30 years, and the John Gielgud of Des Moines, Mr. Murray,

"There's no prescription for TV teaching," said Mrs. Ballou. "It's fun to pioneer. The chances for creative teaching are a joy."

Said Mr. Murray: "There's a lot of said Mr. Murray: "here's a lot of satisfaction in it. It's a tremendous challenge. I don't know how long I can keep up the pace. I jump up in the middle of the night with ideas." Said Miss Hammer: "Mrs. Ballou's husband says that if he finds anything missing around the house here

All three agreed it was much harder work. "You've got to be right. I'm taking up high school physics all over again, studying it at night. You don't dare even misspell a word—not on TV."

They Can Get Rid of You

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—Quiz winner Noreen Nash, wife of Dr. Lee Siegel, told me at 20th Century-Fox: "Til be happy to tell my story." Noreen, who lasted four weeks on "The Big Surprise" and whose category was medical history, continued, "I was first quizzed by the producers on what I knew. The first two weeks on the show, the questions were in the areas that I knew. They didn't tell me any of the answers. I had no idea that I was going to lose on the fourth week. They could always get rid of to lose on the fourth week. They could always get you because they knew what you didn't know." No is currently emoting in "Wake Me When It's Over."

Frank Sinatra has stated that he will never visit England again, because of the things written about him in the British press... And Danny Kaye's recent press in Britain wasn't as good as it used be. Wonder why. At one time discarded two hearts. When he led a low club from the board, East jumped up with the ace to lead another diamond, on which South discarded a club. West won the diamond ten and returned a spade. Declarer glared suspiciously at this card, but finally decided that West must have started with four to the jack and was trying to the lack and was trying trying to the lack and was tryin ing to talk him out of the finesse.

So dummy's ten was played and East won with the jack to cash the last diamond. If he discarded a heart, East would make two heart tricks; if he discarded a club, West could win three club tricks. The only alternative was to throw a spade and abandon the three good cards dummy held in that suit.

South's pass after East's heart opener was quite correct, but the less said the better about the rest of the bidding. A final contract of four spades could have been defeated by a club ruff, but what happened at three no-trump proved a tragi-comedy.

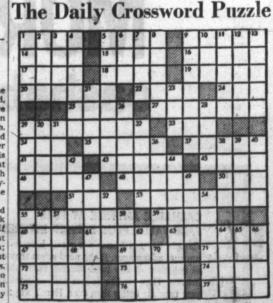

West found an inspired opening lead in the diamond three. Dummy ducked and East won with the jack, returning a low heart taken by South's ace. Declared led the spade king. East grabbed his ace and returned the heart ten, covered by South's jack and won with the heart ten, covered by South's jack and won with East's queen.

On the diamond continuation, dummy's queen fell to East's king. Another diamond drove out North's ace and, in what turned out to be a fortunate error for his side, West absentmindedly failed to unblock. Thus far, South had goodwin and label Artlett.

Hungary Votes Against Russia -By Accident

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI) — A "yes" by Hungary in a vote in which Russia voted "no" caused an uproar in the general assembly's special political committee yesterday.

Hungarian delegate Imre Hollai made the mistake of voting against Russia and the seven other members of the Soviet block on a procedural

The vote was important be cause it resulted in a 36 to 34 decision to shelve a draft resolution on increasing the membership of the security council and the economic and social council. A tie vote would have defeated the move.

One delegate said Hollai got mixed up on his signals from Soviet delegate Arkady A. So-

After the vote was announced, Hollai demanded permission to change his vote. Soblev backed him up. Committee chairman Charles T. O.

King refused.

The argument was resumed later. Hollai said he had been confused. Finally agreement was reached to hold a new vote. This time the side supported by the Soviets won, 41 to 35, with four abstentions.

Chronic Care Plan All Ready to Go

By ALEC MERRIMAN (Colonist Staff Reporter)

VANCOUVER-A greatly stepped-up program of government aid for arterial highway and road maintenance in the cities of Victoria, New Westminster and Vancouver will be one of the dividends of Social Credit debt liquidation accomplishment, Premier W. A. C. Bennett said last night.

"One of the first things we will do will be to help the city streets . . . " he said. "In the coming provincial budget they will get many hundreds of thousands of dollars, instead of the $40,000 they now get," he

STARTS APRIL 1

In a pre-Socred convention speech before a capacity audience of 3,000 in the Orpheum Theatre last night, the Pre mier also said a chronic care program will start in British Columbia on April 1, 1960. Then chronic patients will get the same care as acute patients for $1 a day and the pro vincial government will pay operating costs of approved chronic hospitals.

(Victoria's Gorge Road Hos-pital is expected to be one of the first B.C. hospitals to enter the chronic care plan.) SALARY BOOST

The premier said a salary boost could be expected for civil servants. He told the audience the government will agree and always has accepted the recommendations of the provincial civil service commission with regard to wages. (The commission is expected to recommend to cabinet in December an average wage December an average wage increase of between four and five per cent.)

SPIDERS ATTACK SIR

Mining Centre Buried

MEXICO CITY (UPI) - A MEXICO CITY (UPI) — A cyclone - triggered landslide buried a mining town inland from the storm-ravaged port of Manzanillo, boosting the death toll in the disaster-stricken four-state area of Mexico's Pacific coast to an astimated 1000 reports reachestimated 1,000, reports reaching here said last night. (See earlier story on Page 20.)
Fewer than 200 of the 1,000 residents of the mining town of Minatitlan were accounted for after the slide. Swarms of scorpions and tarantulas, whose nests were jarred loose by the landslide, were reported attacking the survivors.

It was the worst disaster in recent Mexican history. Rafael Chaires, brother of the governor of Colima state, reported 300 dead in Minatitlan. But other sources predicted the toll there would soar

Gen. Daniel Galvan of the Colima military zone flew over the mining town today and reported, "Minatitlan has

PERSISTENT HECKLING
In answer to persistent heck-ling about the hidden Carrothers' report which recommends on civil servants' bargaining rights, the premier said: "I haven't seen the Carrothers' report, have you?"

Mr. Bennett said he thought federal civil servants are entitled to a raise "right away."

Education Minister Leslie Peterson said that next year university scholarships will be increased 50 per cent to $90,000, from $60,000 this year.
